Update regarding COVID-19

Our leadership team has been carefully monitoring the rapidly changing landscape presented by the COVID-19 virus. We remain committed to maintaining business continuity and employee safety as matters evolve.

In the immediate term, Elemental Microanalysis has made a review of all employees and determined, based on their work duties, their ability to work effectively on a remote basis. Duties that can effectively be performed from home, with the appropriate tools, are generally administrative. We do not see any potential remote working situations having a meaningful impact on our ability to maintain production and deliveries at this time. Our production colleagues are working to strict distancing guidelines. COVID-19 is, however, creating an ever-changing situation and we will provide further updates as necessary.

Please continue to contact us in the usual ways, we always look forward to hearing from you. Wishing you the very best now, during the next few months and beyond.
